Session II. Post-Periclean Age: Pylos, Amphipolis, and Sicily

Nanno Marinatos (University of Illinois at Chicago): “Thucydides’ Apology about Amphipolis”

Thucydides says very little about his trial (if such indeed occurred). However, there are hidden clues within the text that help us understand how the author may have felt, what charges were made against him and who defended him. His case is expressed through the voices of others.